COOKIE and his CREW

in... "A SLIGHT CASE of HICCUPS!"

Friendly NEIGHBOR

"IF SHE'D ONLY come over and visit!" wailed Mrs. Binks, looking out of the window. "Mrs. Snowden is a member of one of the oldest, swankiest families in society. And to think she's my new neighbor!"

"Aw, phooey!" Donald Binks couldn't understand his mother at all. "Who cares for that stuff anyhow? We're havin' ball practice out on the front lawn, mom. S' long!"

Leaving his mother twittering about how stand-offish Mrs. Snowden seemed to be, Don dashed out to meet the other guys. He was pitching that afternoon, and was determined to show off his new, fast curve.

Curving his fingers lovingly around the ball, Don let loose with a fast pitch. Zoom! Zip! The ball shot through the air with the greatest of ease, gathering speed until...crash! Right through the window of Mrs. Snowden's living room went the pill, sending out a shower of glass splinters!

"Uh-oh!" Donald Binks swallowed hard. Then, taking a deep breath, he marched towards Mrs. Snowden's house. "I gotta apologize, fellas," he exclaimed. "It's the only manly thing ta do!"

He ran up the front steps, tried the door and found it open. "Well, here goes!" thought Donald, walking straight into the hallway...and straight into a large plant stand.

Smash! Thud! A shower of flowerpots poured down, covering the spic-and-span floor with clods of earth, falling blossoms, pieces of clay flowerpot! Mrs. Snowden's hallway was a battlefield!

"And just what is the meaning of this?" a majestic voice inquired.

Donald was down on his hands and knees trying to pick up the poor remains of the flower stand. Choking, he rose hastily and... wham! He bumped into Mrs. Snowden, sending her off balance!

"Who...are...you?" demanded Mrs. Snowden coldly, picking herself up off the floor.

Again Donald took a deep breath. "I'm Donald Binks, ma'am, an' I live right next door and I..."

"My window! My plants! My house!" Mrs. Snowden's face was as red as any geranium on the floor. "So, you vandal! You housebreaker! You little wretch!"

Seething with fury, Mrs. Snowden walked out of her house, marched like a soldier across her lawn and practically goose-stepped toward Donald Bink's house.

Poor innocent Mrs. Binks watched Mrs. Snowden's approach from her front window. "My!" she exclaimed, clasping her hands together happily. "Mrs. Snowden is coming to visit at last. Isn't that friendly!"

As for Donald, the only thing he could say was... "Gulp!"

FATHERS are FOLKS

IT was "Be Kind to Parents Week" in town, and the whole gang had taken the vow. They were going to try to know their folks better!

"But my pop's an old guy," Kenny objected. "We don't have anything in common!"

Nevertheless, Kenny had promised. That very evening, at dinner, he said to his dad, "Hey, pop, how's about you and me spending tomorrow together, huh?"

Mr. March was very touched. "That is a splendid idea, Ken," he agreed. "Let's start the day off with some tennis. I haven't touched my racket in years!"

On the court the next morning, Kenny was feeling pretty sorry for himself. "I bet my old man's too weak to hit a tennis ball!" he thought. "What a game this is gonna be!"

His "weak" father, however, managed to slam the ball across the net so fast and so hard, that Kenny had all he could do to keep up with the "old man." In fact, after two sets, Kenny collapsed on the court, crying quits.

"Now, how about a swim at the pool?" Mr. March suggested happily.

At the pool, Kenny's eyes widened in surprise as he saw his dad take a racing dive into the water, beat a steady crawl along the length of the pool, swim back under water and return breathing easily.

When Kenny tried the same thing, he wound up breathless and panting, clinging to the side of the pool.

Suddenly, Kenny noticed Margie Scott walking towards him. Margie was definitely on the dreambeam. "Hi, orchid," he said.

"Kenny, is that handsome man your father?" Margie asked. "I must tell him I think he's terif, but def!"

"You mean . . . you mean my father?" Kenny's voice rose to a squeal.

"I think he's absolutely sensation-al!" Margie Scott answered.

Kenny March was taken aback a trifle. "Y'know, Margie," he said thoughtfully, "there's something to what you say. Maybe there's more to my dad than I figured!"

And to his father, Kenny March said, "Say, dad, you and I really gotta be good friends . . . an' I mean it!"

"That, son," said Mr. March, "is a super idea!"
